DNS Name Resolution. To resolve a host name to an IP address using DNS you will need to have a DNS client on your machine, and the client must know the IP address of a DNS server. The DNS client queries its DNS server which then follows through a process to get an answer- See DNS lookups explained.

The collection of host-name-to-IP-address mappings contained with the DNS database is also known as a namespace. Essentially, when looking for a name in DNS, the DNS client first checks a top-level DNS server database. That server tells the client which DNS server hosts the next part of the DNS name, and the client then queries that server.
